

Victoria graduated from York University in 1999 with a BA Hons in History and joined the civil service in 2001.

With over 19 years of experience in HM Land Registry, Victoria is currently Head of International and Stakeholder Co-ordination and is responsible, among other things, for overseeing opportunities to share HM Land Registry's expertise globally and to learn from a global community.

Victoria has a wide and varied experience of land registration and administration including in data related business development, stakeholder strategy and engagement, requirements gathering, project management, customer experience and strategy, resource management, business transformation and change, international business development and international and domestic policy.

Victoria represents HM Land Registry in delivering advisory services to other jurisdictions on land administration matters which have proven beneficial results for customers.

Victoria works with UK Government departments and international stakeholders to support wider government policies on international development. By sharing HM Land Registry's knowledge and experience, the UK has been able to assist countries seeking to introduce new systems and processes or make improvements to an existing land registration system and/or laws through study visits and advisory project work.
